

TRENDS IN HARDWOOD FLOORING

With so many flooring options on the market, it can be overwhelming to decide which flooring is right for you. At Quantum Floors, it's our job to help you find the perfect flooring that you'll love at a great value.

Hardwood Floor Trends

The amount of homes that are installing hardwood floors has risen over the last 5-10 years and continues to grow today. If you are looking to add genuine resale value and even more importantly, beauty to your home, installing hardwood flooring is the answer.

Wide Planks

Homeowners are definitely moving away from the traditional 2 ¼” planks. 3 “, 5”, even 7” wide planks are rapidly gaining in popularity. If you want to make your living space more modern, go with a wider plank, even consider doing your floors with wood of varied widths. Wide planks add depth to a room, making it feel larger, rustic and contemporary. Engineered hardwood is more dimensionally stable than solid hardwoods. This is especially important given Florida’s tropical and humid climate.

Dark Hardwood

And when we say dark, we mean dark. Ebony and Espresso are popular stain colors. The deep color is a contemporary and classic look that offsets light decor beautifully. The dark color can be more difficult to clean and maintain since it shows scratches more easily, but on the other hand, it camouflages imperfections better. Other considerations you should take before buying a dark colored hardwood; dark floors make small rooms look smaller and they tend to show dust more obviously than lighter colors.

Grey Hardwood

Gray has been popping up all over interior design trends, in magazine ads and in showrooms. It is the “new neutral”. If you’re sold on Gray, it’s just a matter of working out if you are a slightly lighter or darker shade kind of person. The beauty is that the shade of Gray can be as unique as you like and will match most decors and colors.

Whitewashed

Whitewashed finishes are not the same as the whitewashed fences and buildings you remember from your childhood. These are very elegant high-end floors that are a great addition to any home, and have become hugely popular in South Florida. It works well with most decors including contemporary, beach house and farm house. We love the rustic charm of a whitewashed floors, not to mention how they brighten up a room. - especially those that don't get a lot of direct sunlight.

Reclaimed/Distressed Wood

Choosing a reclaimed wood hardwood floor is a popular selection for many homeowners and if you are looking for a warm atmosphere, this is the material to use. Its feel invites a closer look and adds character to the room. It can stand punishment without looking damaged and will add value to your home.

Conclusion

What's great about engineered hardwood flooring is that there are so many different options to choose from in materials, colors, finishes...the list goes on. But it can also feel overwhelming. This is your home we're talking about – a place that you spend time in every day and will for many years to come.
